Adoption of the agenda
The agenda was adopted.
Letter dated 28 February 2014 from the Permanent Representative of Ukraine to the United Nations addressed to the President of the Security Council (S/2014/136)
The President (spoke in Spanish): In accordance with rule 37 of the Council's provisional rules of procedure, I invite the representative of Ukraine to participate in this meeting.
In accordance with rule 39 of the Council's provisional rules of procedure, I invite Mr. Jeffrey Feltman, Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, to participate in this meeting.
The Security Council will now begin its consideration of the item on its agenda.
I give the floor to Mr. Feltman.
Mr. Feltman: Today I will briefly update the Council on developments related to the conflict in eastern Ukraine, as well as on my own recent visit to the country, from 15 to 17 December 2014, in continuation of the Secretary-General's good offices.
I would like to begin by clearly stating our alarm. Following weeks of relative calm, the Council meets today amid the worst hostilities in eastern Ukraine since the ceasefire and the Minsk protocol were agreed to on 5 September. Encouraging signs of progress, such as the exchange of hundreds of prisoners, are quickly being overshadowed by renewed fighting and a deepening political stalemate. Ukraine, as well as its neighbours and the broader region, cannot afford the current violent status quo. The escalation of fighting threatens to unravel the Minsk protocol.
While the heavy fighting of the past few days was initially concentrated around Donetsk airport, the numbers of dead and injured, including innocent civilians, are quickly rising elsewhere, as violence spreads throughout the regions of Donetsk and Luhansk, including in heavily populated civilian areas such as the city of Donetsk. The conflict is also reportedly inching dangerously close to cities such as Mariupol and Debaltsevo, and endangering areas that until recently have been relatively quiet. In another sign of escalation, reinforcements of fighters are reported on both sides, with the deployment of more sophisticated and heavier weaponry. In Davos today, President Poroshenko stated that there were more than 9,000 regular Russian troops in Ukraine, an accusation that Moscow denies.
On 13 January, as a direct result of the renewal of the fighting, 12 civilians lost their lives and 17 were seriously wounded when their bus was hit in Volnovakha. The United Nations has no means of verifying the facts independently, but after visiting the site three times and conducting crater analysis, the Special Monitoring Mission (SMM) to Ukraine of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe concluded that "the rockets that caused craters 1 and 2 had been fired from a north-north-eastern direction" and that "the rockets may have been fired approximately 20 kilometres from the point of impact. The SMM is not able to independently verify the point of origin of the rockets or to identify the entity that fired them."
As the Secretary-General stated, this incident, which must be thoroughly investigated and for which those responsible must be brought to justice, is a stark reminder of the urgent need to halt the violence.
Let me also say a few words on the humanitarian situation, which has deteriorated further as conflict has again intensified. A country that until a year ago had no displaced people now has at least 850,000 citizens displaced within its borders and over 600,000 in neighbouring States, according to Ukrainian sources.
Humanitarian actors must have access to do their life-saving work. All parties to the conflict have an obligation to guarantee free and unhindered humanitarian access to all people in need, irrespective of where they are located, and they also have to fully respect international humanitarian law. A recent directive with respect to crossing the contact line from Government-held to rebel-held areas could make it exceedingly difficult for humanitarian actors to move aid into areas beyond Government control. It is critical that resources be made available to meet life-saving needs on the ground. The 2015 Strategic Response Plan requests $189 million, and few commitments have been made as yet.
Regrettably, the upsurge in fighting has been accompanied by mutual recriminations between Kyiv

How to use UNSCdeb8

- It is a 'specialized corpus', i.e. assembled from a single and continuous source of documents
- It allows comparisons over time, particularly of the P5 countries
- It can be used in tandem with corpus-linguistic analysis software such as Antconc or Wordsmith, for example to:
 - Calculate the most statistically significant key-words that differentiate the members of the UNSC
 - Examine how the discourse of a particular UNSC member evolves over time or changes with regard to specific thematic issues
 - Trace subtle discursive changes within a particular member state's outlook on a particular crisis

Working through case studies

Example: the conflict in Ukraine from 2014

But what about the data behind the scene?

Diplomacy as performance

“We use many beautiful words about the need to peacefully settle political crises (...). However, after discussing Ukraine here about 30 times, the question arises as to how well-aligned the declarations are with the situation in the country. Are they directly applicable, or are they provided just for the sake of eloquence?”

(Russian Ambassador Churkin 2015. United Nations Security Council 7365:7)

Data quality and data sets in the social sciences

- Processes and debates surrounding the design of a large database shed light on what quality might mean in the social sciences.
- Data quality control & future use: Who is (legally) responsible if this database is used by others & comes up with wrong results?
- Even assuming high data quality, a lot simply cannot be captured by this type of data that appears to capture complex social and political processes.
- Despite successfully building a unique and powerful database, a number of crucial epistemological issues remain.

Are we just being hypnotised by the tool?

Behind the scenes is where the fun takes place!

- What can we say with this tool, what cannot be grasped?
- Is it just a glorified index & search tool?
- What happened before & after these speeches including closed-door preparatory meetings and behind-the-scenes negotiations?
- Can a corpus assembled partly through language translation be used for corpus analytics?
 - Example: Translating Chinese terms (“community”), culturally-situated use of first-person etc.
- Are we missing or forgetting crucial qualitative data just because it is not available?
- How can fieldwork (observations & interviews) help complicate the story?
- How do bodies perform discourse and how can that be captured?
- How can bodily reactions from others be understood?
